IS A SEAMSTRESS A 'WORKMAN?'

The following item which was printed in the London Daily Telegraph of May 13 will be of interest to those who were concerned in the decision recently given by Mr Hazeland, at the Magistracy, in the case in which Mr R. G. Heckford, manager for Messrs Powell and Company, sued the head tailer for disobedience, etc :- Whether a seamstress is r workman within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act was discussed in an appeal from the Bloomsbury County court. His Honour Judge Bacon had decided in the negative in an action brought by a Miss Maynard, employed at the establishment of Peter Robinson (Limited), and given judgment for dofendants, notwithstanding the fact that the jury had found in favour of plaintiff, and awarded her £25 damages. The learned judge not only expressed the opinion that Miss Maynard did not come within the Act, but held that there was no evidence as to low the accident happened.

Mr Ball argued that plaintiff was included in the class of employes entitled to the benefit of the Act. The class did not comprise domestic or menial servants, but only applied to 'labourors, servants in husbandry, journeymon, artificers, handicraftsmen, or others engaged in manual labour.' Counsel submitted that his client was an artificer. She was engaged to work a sewing machine, and to iron the seams which it made in the manufacture of ladies dresses. Owing to the absence of a fender round the stove at which the irons were heated, her dress eaught tire, and she was

Mr McCall, K.Ca on the other hand, contended that the dress could only have been burned by the iron which plaintiff was handling, and there was no allegation as to negligence in regard to that. Counsel further submitted that the young lady was not engaged in manual labour within the Act, because the phrase did not necessarily mean to work with the hands.

The Lord Chief Justice thought the learned judge went beyond what he ought to have done in saying that there was no evidence to go to the jury as to how the accident happened, and so far as that was concorned there ought to be an order for a new trial. The question as to whether the plaintif came within the Act was one of some difficulty. In the popular sense he doubted whether it could be said that plaintiff was engaged in manual labour, but it was clear that skilled labour was not excluded by the statute. It was not, however, without some feeling of doubt that he came to the conclusion that plaintiff was engaged in manual labour, although in skilled manual labour. Although she did not act by the strength of her hands, he was of opinion that she was engaged in manual labour within the principle of some of the authorities, and was therefore entitled to suc. The other judges concurred, and a new

Leave to appeal was granted on the point as to whether plaintiff came within the Act or not.

The late Mr R. M. Campbell.

There was a very large gathering of the 9th instant of the friends of the late Mr R. M. Campbell at the Crematorius chapel, Shanghai, where the remains lay on the platform, covered and surrounded by beautiful wreaths of flowers bearing kind messages of love and sympathy. Mi Campbell and two of her daughters were there and several other ladies, and there could be no doubt of the deep sorrow with which all were filled. The first part of the service was read by the Rev. H. C. Hodges, M.A., and the latter part by Bishop Moule, who made a short but most touching address, urging all to prepare themselves for the close of their chapter on earth by accepting the Saviour before it is too late. It was impossible not to be moved by the beauty and carnestness of his words. The flags at the British Consulate and at the Country Club end Bace Club were halfmasted out of respect for the memory of British Trade in Manchuria.

A St Petersburg newspaper, Siberian Life, states that Southern Manchuria is flooded with British goods, that British commerce is firmly established in that region and flourishing in Mukden, Kirin, and Harbin, and that Russia has great difficulty in capturing these markets owing to the fact that British goods are the cheaper. A Ship Towed 2100 Miles. What is claimed to be a record tow Australian waters has just been accomplished by Meser- J. and A. Brown's steame Duckenfield. The steamer left Newcastle on May 15 with the ship Samuel Plimsoll in tow for Albany, and a telegram was received by the owners advising the safe arrival of both vessels at the West Australian port at 5.30 p.m. on Wednesday, May 27. The Duckenfield took the ship along in splendid style, covering the distance, 2100 miles, in 12 days 51 hours. The Samuel Plimsoll is a ship of 1459 tons, so that the towage feat f the Duckenfield is a highly creditable performance, and one which the owners and all concerned have reason to be proud of. The Samuel Plimsoll is to be used as a coal sulk at Albany.

Prench Indo-China. The Consular report on the trade of French Indo-China for the year 1902, just issued from the Foreign Office, is a very bare document. There are, however, two or three points worthy of notice. Railway enterprises are stated to be progressing with fair speed, judging by the amount of money advanced. This forward policy with regard to milway matters is characteristic just now of all the French colonies. Rice prices are well maintained. The usual forecast of a bad crop appeared again with perhaps more reason; but our Consul advises that this is now a pretty usual thing, and does not apparently attach much importance to it. It is with the greatest regret we learn of the death of Mr George Forguson, chief engineer of the P. M. S.S. Siberia, which sad event was wired from Kobe yesterday. Mrs Adair's house in Curzon Street was decorated with red roses, palms and smilax, the roses in many places following the design on the walls, and gave to the whole scene an appearance of exquisite beauty and harmony. Considerable dissatisfaction has been aroused among small investors by the refusal to allot any of the new Transvaul Loan to applicants for less than £2,000, and they say that it is another instance when the Government has favoured big City financiers to the detriment of the general public, but the fact is that steps had to be taken to check the designs of speculators buying these small shares in order to sell immediately at a profit. A DEFENCE OF RUSSIAN DIPLOMACY.

This well-known story is suggested by the vigorous denial of Russia. that she his made the demands on China, in regard to Manchuria, that were discussed in our issue for May 2, says the Literary Digest. The published reports of these lemands, we are assured, 'are absolutely incorrect'; but in the same breath the Russian diplomata go on to talk of Manchurin as if it were already a Russian province. They assure us that the Russian Government ' has no intention to exclude other countries from advantages now enjoyed in Manchuria," and loast of all the United States, whose commerce and capital 'are those which Russia most desires to attract,' Count Cassini, the Russian ambassadorat Washington, has favored the press with a long interview on the Man-
